WAITING FOR TIMBER

This Is Delaying Orient Construction Work.

PLENTY OF STEEL RAILS

But Lack of Other Material Keeps Other Crews Back.

J. A. Foley, superintendent of the Orient The general committee of the L. O. O. building of the Orient. He said there and that was inability to secure bridge

Mr. Foley said that railroads believed in advertising but he thought recently The board has arranged to establish and the opportunity should not be missed. the Orient was getting more than its these branch roads and he was under the impression that the promoters of the Orient would finish the main line from Wichita to the Pacific ocean before building any branches,

> When asked when he expected the road to be built into Wichita the superintendent replied: "next full." He said they had about one hundred miles of road built at this end and about two hundred miles in Mexico. He said they had plenty of steel rails but the trouble was to get The Wichita Central W. C. T. U. will track when they could not get the bridge bridge timbers. It was impossible to lay timbers fast enough to bridge the streams so that they could get their engines

> > There are perhaps very few people who fully comprehend the magnitude of the undertaking of building a railroad from Kansas City to Port Stillwell. The Orient when completed will not be any cheap john road but will be one of the very best in America. When told that some of the Missouri Pacific engineers pronounced it the best track they had ever seen and that the Orient did not wind around to get grades but plummed straight through the country making

"Mr. Stilwell is evidently going on the Washington, D. C., two years ago and principle that what is worth doing at seems to be thoroughly imbued with the all is worth doing well. The Orient is one of the best roads in the west. They statehood, and of El Reno, his adopted are using only heavy steel rails and all town. He will go from here to Andover the material used in the construction is to join Mrs. Lincoln and then on to of the best. The road of course will run through some rough country but I think the engineers are getting a good grade and not very many miles will be added to the length of the road by wind ing around to get an easy grade. The some of the roads do long after they have been built. It is building on the shortest line at greater cost."
